

Figure 1-2 A cavity in a body connected by a small hole to the outside. Radiation incident on the hole is completely absorbed after successive reflections on the inner surface of the cavity. The hole absorbs like a blackbody. In the reverse process, in which radiation leaving the hole is built up of contributions emitted from the inner surface, the hole emits like a blackbody.